Abhi Sir, has unique insight into the benefits and challenges of teaching an online course/video lessons. "A lot of time is wasted in the physical classroom, and not just in the ways one might expect," he said. "In a physical classroom, all students are presumed to be at the same place in the class, but one student may still be unsure about the previous lesson or unit, while another student learned this material before and is ready for the next unit."

"The power of the online classroom/video lessons is that every student can proceed at their own pace," said Abhi Sir. "This changes my role as a teacher to one who supports each student individually as they progress."

In 2012, Abhi Sir's students had a pass rate of 94% with 154 out of 164 students passing their course IAS Prelims 2012.

The students were always amazed, thankful, and best of all the videos usually helped them grasp the concept they were struggling with. The students would often comment that it was like having their own personal tutor.

Such methods of teaching and integration of technology not only increase content retention, but also make the learning process fun for students."
